

Felix Editor's Report
For Imperial College Union Council Meeting, 12 December 2006
A report by Andy Sykes, Felix Editor

Felix's production

The last issue of term has been printed, and we are winding down for Christmas.

Ongoing distribution issues

I had originally thought that all distribution issues were sorted; however, it seems that the new publication day of Friday means that the postroom aren't getting copies out to Wye, Silwood and the medic campuses until Monday. I'll look at this again at the start of next term, because it's driving me absolutely nuts.

The Felix office

Completely finished and usable once more. I'd like to thank Eric Lai for his help in getting this sorted.

Complaints

We've been hit with a barrage of complaints over the recent debate on Islam. I've responded to each one personally, and that appears to have been satisfactory. I'd like to thank Stephen Brown, the Comment Editor, for keeping the debate under control and keeping a lot of angry people from destroying us. We've also had a number of compliments on the way Steve and I handled the situation, and our personal responses to the comment pieces and letters.

Felix's barnight

Thanks to everyone that came down, and thanks to those that helped organise it.
