 - i. Opinions can change between the age of University and then going out in to employment.
 - ii. The votes could be put behind a college log in.

- i) Members could put a statement in the minutes as to why they voted that way.
 - i. It was highlighted that this would be a logistical challenge.
- j) It was suggested that if passed, this should be implemented next year as members stood without this as a requirement of the role to have their vote documented in the public domain.
- i. Members may resign if they feel uncomfortable having their votes recorded in a public domain.
- k) It was suggested that a working group could be set up to work out the logistics.

Motion to Publish the Voting Records of Council Members
Proposed by RCSU PG Ordinary Member Andrew Tranter
Seconded by John Selby - Physics department

ICU Notes:

1. Council meetings are open to all members of ICU.
2. There is no present mechanism for members to check the voting records of their representatives, short of attending the relevant council meeting.
3. Article L.100.1 of the constitution, which states that “[Council shall have the authority to] represent the voice of students”.

ICU Believes:

1. That students are often unable to attend lengthy council meetings solely to monitor their representatives voting records.
2. That for council to be truly representative or democratic when students cannot monitor their own representatives voting records.
3. That the publication of council members voting records is thus a democratic necessity.

ICU Resolves:

- 4) In principle, to record and publish an account of how each council member votes in council, on a per-item basis, on the union website.¹
- 5) To commit to enacting the previous resolution in time for the next 2 meetings of council.

¹ A note on implementation: this will probably be easiest through the use of electronic voting pad things, often used in lectures. I imagine college has some that we can use.

Union stance on cycling infrastructure in London

A paper by George Butcher, Ordinary Council Member for the Faculty of Engineering
Seconded by Thomas Bealing

Background

This paper aims to give the union a stance on cycling infrastructure in London, particularly on roads commonly used by its students including Queensgate, High Street Kensington, Brompton/Lillie Road and Cromwell Road.

The Union Notes

- Between the 5th and the 18th of November 2013, six cyclists died in London: Brian Holt, 62; Francis Golding, 69; Roger William De Klerk, 43; Venera Minakhmetova, 24; a 21-year-old man from St John's Wood and a man believed to be in his 60s (BBC News)
- Lories account for over half of cyclist fatalities despite making up just 5% of London's traffic (London Cycling Campaign)
- According to colleges recent transport survey cycling is the second most popular method of transport after walking.
- Imperial College is committed to aiming to increase the number of its staff and students cycling as part of its 'StepChange' campaign
- The road infrastructure should allow for the needs of all its users including drivers and pedestrians, but the current infrastructure does tend to provide these groups with their needs

The Union Believes

- Cycling should be a safe means of transport, accessible to all
- People who want to cycle to college, should not be deterred by dangerous roads, HGVs and junctions
- Cyclists deserve cycling infrastructure which is consistent along routes and which separates them from motor traffic at the most dangerous junctions

The Union Resolves

1. To lobby the college to take a public position pro improving the cycling infrastructure in London for the safety of its students and staff.
2. To lobby local authorities and MPs for improved cycling infrastructure across London including
 - a. Consistent cycle infrastructure on routes, particularly those most used by Imperial students
 - b. Compulsory proximity sensors and other cyclist safety devices on all HGVs
3. To liaise with the London Cycling Campaign to see what role it can play in lobbying for better cycling infrastructure

Appendix

To support this paper, members of the bike users group were asked for their answers to four questions, how often do you cycle to college, do you think your journey is safe, should the union lobby for better cycling infrastructure and what would you tell policy makers about your experience of cycling in London? The full results are available upon request from the author on george.butcher11@imperial.ac.uk. These are some of the results.

Of the respondents who replied sometimes or yes, they tended to describe the actions they took to make their route safe. Some respondents cycled through Hyde Park. The author is struck by how many seemed to accept a certain level of danger as understandable.

The sample was inherently biased towards cyclists. They are never going to say that the union should care for cyclists, but the very high number of respondents who said yes, clearly shows the demand for union action.

Free Text

Highlights of the free text are as follows. Ninety four responders wrote over 11 000 words between them so I didn't include all of them. They are available upon request.

"Yes, I think that if roads were safer, more people would cycle, without any fear. I have got used to it by now, but I know a few people who do not cycle because they are scared it would be too unsafe."

" Road architecture in London is not very well suited for increasing cyclist numbers and this needs to be addressed. Other European cities can manage wide sea changes and I don't understand why London cannot."

"It is the union's role to be a voice for it's [sic] students on important issue. Many students (and staff) currently cycle and cycle safety is an important issue for them. Cycling offers great benefit to one's health and one's wallet, not to mention being lots of fun and so doing anything to increase the likelihood of students cycling would fall within the union's remit (and one of the primary reasons people don't cycle is safety fears)."

"Nearly died 4 times"

"I love cycling, London and cycling in London but the statistics show that it really is an unnecessarily dangerous pastime and gives the city a bad reputation - the terror on my mother's face when I told her I was cycling to Uni said it all! Cycling is great for the health (and would be better if the air was better), mood and a sense of connection to the city."

"Striking the balance between a car-friendly environment and a cyclist-friendly one is a very difficult task. There is no clear resolution that leaves both parties happy. However, the current set-up overwhelmingly accommodates for cars over cyclists and in the short-term, this balance needs to be redressed."

"Hammersmith roundabout is hell"

"Most of the time, cycling in London feels safe. However, it is the occasions where 'luck' seems to play a part in survival which need to be assessed. By improving cycling infrastructure, you would be removing this reliance on luck, and giving all road users the means to be FULLY in control of their own, and others, safety."

"I love cycling in London and I want to be able to feel safe to do it"

Motion on the Criminalisation of Student Protest
Proposed by Andrew Tranter RCSU Ordinary Member PG
Seconded by Dan Goldwater – Physics

ICU Notes:

1. The arrest of the President of the University of London Union (ULU) under Section 11 of the Public Order Act, which requires “advanced notice of a public procession”.
 - a. That no such procession was planned in advance.
 - b. That the procession that did occur did not leave the university campus.
 - c. That the bail conditions subsequently imposed on the ULU president require them “not to engage in protest [...] within half a half mile boundary of any University”.
2. The dispersal of a nonviolent sit-in protest at the University of London Senate House building on 4th December 2013 by the Metropolitan Police.
 - a. That no injunction or eviction order was issued against the protestors.
 - b. That the policing tactic used has been described as “incredibly violent”², with police officers “punching people indiscriminately”³ and “pulling [protestors] hair and clothes”.⁴ Video evidence exists seemingly showing a police officer punching a protestor in the face.⁵
 - c. That this dispersal resulted in at least three arrests.
3. The suspension of five students at the University of Sussex for engaging in a nonviolent sit-in protest.
4. That the events described in 2. And 3. have been condemned by the National Union of Students⁶
5. That many Imperial students may have colleagues, family and friends at these Universities. That furthermore, many Imperial students may be jointly supervised by academics at these Universities.
6. That a demonstration against violent policing on Thursday 5th December 2013 resulted in a further 36 arrests.
7. That those arrested included journalists, legal observers, and at least one ICU member.
8. That the bail conditions imposed upon those arrested prevent many students from attending their own university in any capacity.
- 9.

ICU Believes:

1. That freedom of nonviolent protest is a cornerstone of democracy.
2. That nonviolent protest is a key method by which ICU and other student unions can achieve organisational objectives.
3. That the use of force to suppress nonviolent protest is unacceptable.
4. That it is our duty to protect our students against abuse, harassment and violence, whoever the perpetrator.
5. That the violent policing perpetrated recently against peaceful student protest is a threat to not only students’ health and welfare, but also to ICU and student unionism as a whole.
6. That the arrest of a student union president and the imposition of disabling bail conditions represent an attempt to suppress nonviolent student protest.

⁶ <http://www.nus.org.uk/en/news/press-releases/nus-responds-to-incidents-at-student-protests/?load=6&top=317>

7. That the use of violent policing and internal disciplinarys by Universities to curtail nonviolent protest is both against the spirit of higher education and a threat to the independence of our student unions.
8. That the arrest of journalists and legal observers clearly suggests that the arrests were arbitrary and not based on the actions of the individuals concerned.
9. That imposing bail conditions preventing students from studying is clearly disproportionate.

ICU Resolves:

1. To declare our refusal to be intimidated by these recent events.
2. To condemn and campaign against violent policing perpetrated against peaceful student protests.
3. To condemn and campaign against the arrest of the president of ULU and the imposition of disabling bail conditions.
4. To condemn and campaign against any University's use of violent policing and internal disciplinarys to curtail nonviolent protest.
5. To support and defend any ICU member subjected to violent policing or internal disciplinary for nonviolent protest.
6. To release a statement describing this policy.
7. To write to the Metropolitan Police informing them of this policy.
8. To write to the president of ULU, informing them of this policy, expressing our solidarity and requesting further coordination to enact this policy.
9. To form a working group to enact this policy.
10. To condemn the aforementioned mass arrest of protestors, journalists and legal observers.
11. To condemn the use of bail conditions to suppress nonviolent protest.
12. To condemn the use of unnecessary bail conditions which prevent students from studying.
